The Compassionate Friends Credo

We need not walk alone. We are The Compassionate Friends. We reach out to each other with love, with understanding, and with hope.

The children we mourn have died at all ages and from many different causes, but our love for them unites us. Your pain becomes my pain, just as your hope becomes my hope.

We come together from all walks of life, from many different circumstances. We are a unique family because we represent many races, creeds, and relationships. We are young, and we are old. Some of us are far along in our grief but others still feel a grief so fresh and so intensely painful that they feel helpless and see no hope.

Some of us have found our faith to be a source of strength, while some of us are struggling to find answers. Some of us are angry, filled with guilt or in deep depression, while others radiate an inner peace, but whatever pain we bring to this gathering of The Compassionate Friends, it is pain we will share, just as we share with each other our love for the children who have died.

We are all seeking and struggling to build a future for ourselves, but we are committed to building a future together. We reach out to each other in love to share the pain as well as the joy, share the anger as well as the peace, share the faith as well as the doubts, and help each other to grieve as well as to grow.

We need not walk alone.

WHO ARE WE?

The Compassionate Friends is a nonprofit, nonsectarian, mutual assistance, self-help organization offering friendship and understanding to bereaved parents and siblings.

Our primary purpose is to assist the bereaved in the positive resolution of the grief experienced upon the death of a child and to support their efforts to achieve physical and emotional health.

The secondary purpose is to provide information and education about bereaved parents and siblings for those who wish to understand. Our objective is to help members of the community, including family, friends, employers, co-workers, and professionals to be supportive.

Meetings are open to all bereaved parents, grandparents and siblings. No dues or fees are required to belong to the Metrowest Chapter of The Compassionate Friends.

Chapter News

It's with a heavy heart because of extenuating circumstances we will be moving our Holliston evening meeting to a new location. Conditions dictate this move as the only way we can preserve the longevity of The Metrowest Chapter was to move the location of the monthly meetings to a new location. St. Mary's Parish has been for our benefactor for Thirty-Seven years, one of the longest continues chapters in the country, And for me, it's like leaving the home you were brought up in. My hope is that we will find some old timers to our chapter who would be willing to facilitate our meetings and we will continue to follow the Credo of The Compassionate Friends.

Our new location for our evening meetings starting on the Third Tuesday of the month of September.

The new location will be The Milford Senior Center, 60 North Bow St. Milford. The starting time will change from 7:30 P.M. to 7:00 P.M. One big plus is that we will be able to display our library of book which we have not been able to display because of COVID-19 and meetings held on Zoom.

Our Children Remembered

As a regular feature, the newsletter acknowledges anniversaries of the deaths of our children/siblings and their birthdays. This issue covers the months, September and October. If information about your loved one is missing, incorrect or our chapter files are in error, please send the correct data, including your name, address, and telephone number, the name of your loved one and the birthday and date and cause of death to the newsletter editor, Ed Motuzas, 26 Simmons Dr., Milford, MA 01757-1265.

THE SIBLING CORNER

This page is dedicated to siblings together adjusting to grief thru encouragement & sharing

"Siblings Walking Together." We are the surviving siblings of The Compassionate Friends. We are brought together by the deaths of our brothers and sisters. Open your hearts to us, but have patience with us. Sometimes we will need the support of our friends. At other times we need our families to be there. Sometimes we must walk alone, taking our memories with us, continuing to become the individuals we want to be. We cannot be our dead brother or sister; however, a special part of them lives on with us.

When our brothers and sisters died, our lives changed. We are living a life very different from what we envisioned, and we feel the responsibility to be strong even when we feel weak. Yet we can go on because we understand better than many others the value of family and the precious gift of life. Our goal is not to be the forgotten mourners that we sometimes are, but to walk together to face our tomorrows as surviving siblings of The Compassionate Friends.

COPING WITH THE GRIEF OF OLDER SIBLINGS

Everyone grieves differently. A sibling's response is determined by his or her relationship to the child who died and place in the family.

The most difficult thing for them is that the foundation of the family is shaken. Everything has changed over night and that leaves them feeling insecure.

The death of a sibling is a mid - life crisis for kids. Suddenly they are aware of their own mortality. That may cause them to become over - protective. They may also overreact to illnesses.

They will rarely talk about their feelings because they're afraid it will hurt their parents more. The reality here is that parents are at the bottom of the list of people they will talk to, but that doesn't mean they aren't talking to someone.

School becomes a terrible problem and grades drop because they can't function any better than we do as parents.

At some point in the grief process overachieving can also become a way of dealing with pain.

Conflicts intensify between remaining siblings.

Sometimes there is nothing you can do for your kids but allow them to hurt. At the same time, it is hard for parents to let the grief be the child's problem.

They feel they have to make up for the child who's gone.

Kids will think, "it should have been me. You wouldn't hurt quite as much if it were me."

There is likely to be some distancing for awhile. There is also a fear that if you pull away you'll never be close again, but that usually doesn't happen.

You have to develop memories of things that happened after the child died, and you have to develop new traditions, but that takes years.

The loss surfaces for young people at every milestone in their lives - significant birthdays, graduation, weddings, parenthood, etc.

The child who is suddenly the only child has envy of other kids siblings. They seem to experience more anger and pain than other bereaved siblings do.

It is difficult for kids when the parents energy is wrapped up in the dead child. Inside they're screaming, "Look at me, I'm still alive."

The reality of death is that there is always remorse about things done or left undone.

Siblings can benefit from this painful experience. They may gain a different perspective on life, value it more highly, and adopt new priorities. They learn things that strengthen them and they tend to be more compassionate and sensitive than other young people.

A Part of Me

You were not just my brother, but
You were my friend as well.
You were supposed to be here always
Or till the world came to an end.
I know that we argued and
Seemed to disagree,
But I could always count on you
To be there for me.

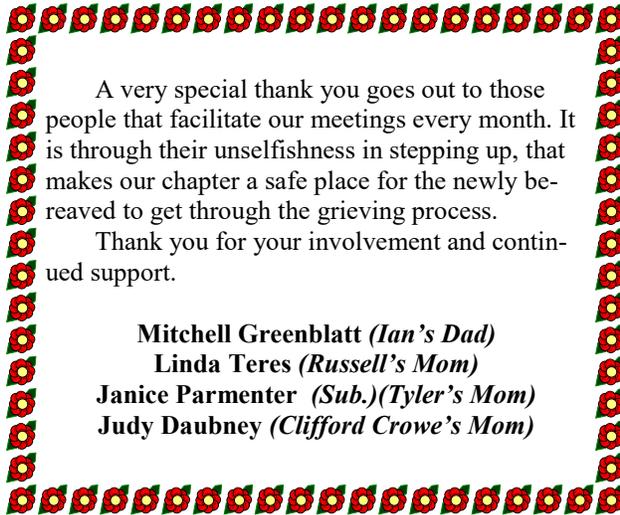

THE COMPASSIONATE FRIENDS OF METROWEST

You may be gone from this world I see,
But you will always be a part of me.

A very special thank you goes out to those people that facilitate our meetings every month. It is through their unselfishness in stepping up, that makes our chapter a safe place for the newly bereaved to get through the grieving process.

Thank you for your involvement and continued support.

Mitchell Greenblatt (Ian's Dad)
Linda Teres (Russell's Mom)
Janice Parmenter (Sub.)(Tyler's Mom)
Judy Daubney (Clifford Crowe's Mom)

The following article was written by Donna Ellis, whose son, Rick, died by suicide in 1981. She and her husband belong to the Kansas City, Missouri Chapter of TCF.

Historically, suicide has been both admired and punished. To the ancient Greeks, it was a good and admirable solution to life's problems. Later, Greeks and Romans condemned it as a crime against the state. The surviving members of a suicide's family were punished, fined, their property taken away. The Roman Catholic church during St. Augustine's life viewed suicide as a sin, refusing both funeral rights and burial on consecrated ground. Later, suicide was seen as a manifestation of insanity, and since insanity itself was viewed as shameful, suicide was also seen as something full of guilt and shame. Some of those feelings of blame or shame are carried over into today's thinking. Please allow me to share some of my own feelings on this subject.

We live in a "pleasure-oriented" society. Most persons do not care to discuss or hear about death in any form - much less suicide. Many of us have trouble communicating our pain and questions about death because our listeners feel that we are being "morbid." I think their basic feeling is fear. So none of us have experienced death first-hand and we're afraid of it. But those of us who have lost someone we love have come close to death and have a real need to discuss it, get it out into the open and deal with it.

Even to many of you who have lost children through other means, the thought of a child's suicide may make you feel fear, but we who have been there feel differently. At one meeting of the Kansas City chapter, Bill McKneely made the statement: "Unless you come to the place where you can treat a death by suicide no differently than any other kind of death - you haven't fully dealt with it." It shocked me at first because even I had preconceived ideas about suicide. I had felt that suicides occurred in families who were unloving, unsupporting, underprivileged, or unreligious and I felt a complete sense of loss as to why this should happen in our family. We met Keith Kockau on our first visit here to Compassionate Friends. Keith was the first of a number of parents who showed us that indeed suicide does occur in loving, supportive families. Suicide comes from within an individual, not caused by outside factors. If the warning signals are open - enough, thereby recognized, sometimes the suicide can be averted. Many potential suicides have difficulty expressing their common feelings, however, much less feelings of suicide. Their warning signals may be so veiled that it is almost impossible to see. I guess my message is that we need to replace our fear with awareness. To realize that we are all victims of our circumstances and that survivors of suicide deserve no more blame than any other survivor.

In our case, our son's death was unquestionably suicide. Our son was NOT insane.

In this time and place where most people consider a discussion of death or suicide gruesome or morbid, I have considered Compassionate Friends my sanctuary. I could, and can, come here and share my feelings by crying, discussing, helping, being angry, or laying a problem on you. Thanks, Compassionate Friends, for letting me get one more thing off my chest.

THE LIST OF FIRSTS TUGS AT THE HEART

How well I remember... the first time I mowed the grass after you died. I cried for three hours (that's how long it took to mow it alone)... the first time I heard the high school band you were in play (it was in the year after your death). Inwardly I screamed... outwardly silent tears rolled down my cheeks.

The first movie we went to, “Chariots of Fire” (we left crying before the movie was even half through)...the day your sister got her driver’s license (She was 17 when she got it .she couldn’t stand the thoughts of driving... that is how you died)... the first time your sister was 30 minutes late coming home while driving... (We were frantic... we called the friends she had gone out with... the state patrol... and the hospital. Once I got through ranting and raving at her, I fell apart)... the first time your mom and I were 30 minutes late coming home. (Your sister was as bad as we had been... did she ever let us have it!)

The first day of school, (seeing the bus go by, you wanted to drive a bus)... the first time I went fishing (I went to the same place we often went. To the place you caught your first trout. I cried more than I fished. I was glad I was the only person there) ... the first family reunion (I felt so isolated, so alone, so guilty... .How could I go when you couldn’t)... the first wedding we went to. Friends of yours. We felt so robbed.. my son would never know the joy of having a helpmate of having his own child)... the first funeral I went to (I sat in shock... the flowers, the casket, the funeral home. I was back at your funeral!)... the first Christmas our doorbell rang and there stood one of your friends. It made me feel good that he thought so much of you that he would come to see us. His presence spoke highly of you”. He has not missed a Christmas in seven years... the first time I sang again (I quit singing shortly after you died.) It took me four years to start back... there is still one song I can’t sing.. .can’t listen to... As I look over the list of firsts... my heartstrings are pulled anew. I still miss you son.

BLESSINGS INSIDE SORROW

There are blessings inside sorrow, or so I have been told. I am not sure I always agree. At times I can see the gifts I have been given. Love... without measure... fills my heart when I think of you. But I loved you then, too, when you were in my arms, not in my heart. And I miss you now. The emptiness you left can never be filled, not by any blessings I might receive from sorrow.

And yet, still, I wonder, are there blessings? Would I have known how much I cared for you... for your brothers, for your Dad, were it not for your coming, and so suddenly, softly, leaving, without a good-bye? Would I treasure the life I have remaining if it weren’t for your loss?

Certainly I loved, and treasured before you left, but hasn’t my sorrow caused me to express that love and to treasure more highly those around me? I KNOW I can’t take for granted that they will always be.

In the aftermath of losing you, when life lay crumbled around me... still was there not a glimmer of hope? That life would go on, and, somehow, we would survive and build on the ashes of our broken hearts. Building somehow in spite of our pain. Mixing the cement of our love with tears, we bound ourselves together even more tightly than ever before. And our love grows stronger, and we have not forgotten.

What a bitter lesson! Still, the emptiness will never be filled. There yet remains a hole in my heart... and in all our hearts. Dear son, we will never forget you. The blessings inside our sorrow will never fill the hole you left in the fabric of our lives. It remains open, a testament that you mattered, and that your coming and soft going made a difference. In that difference lies the blessings inside our sorrow. We were blessed to have held you for a time, even though you could not stay. Even through our tears, we smile at the memories. We know that you are not completely gone. You shadow our lives, affecting them in big ways and small. Though I would trade these blessings in a minute just to have you back in my arms, I am indeed grateful for the blessings inside sorrow.

We Are Your Organization

We are your organization. We ARE you. No better, no smarter, no more experienced, just fellow bereaved parents struggling along. Among our group are homemakers, bankers, teachers, office workers, attorneys, justices of the peace, police officers, waitresses... in short, the whole human spectrum. Just people, grieving parents who are trying to help themselves and others. No pat answers, no glib replies, no religion, no color, no judgments truly. We ARE you. You may not know us all so well. Say nothing or say a lot. No barriers, no requirements, only the promise that whether you listen or lead, you will find genuine understanding and shared experiences. No need to spill your guts or bare your soul; just come to a meeting and realize that you are truly not alone in your grief and loneliness, in your anger and “craziness” and pain. We ARE you.

THE COMPASSIONATE FRIENDS OF METROWEST

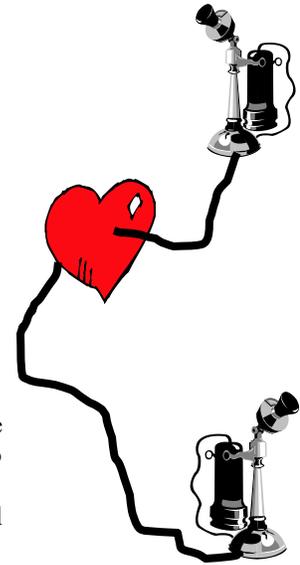

Phone Friends

Sometimes it helps to just be able to talk to someone; maybe at a time when pain or stress seems too much to bear. We maintain a list of Telephone Friends; people who are willing to listen, to commiserate, to give whatever support they can. In a time of need, feel free to call one of our Telephone Friends.

- Ed & Joan Motuzas, ...Scott, age 31, Kidney and Liver Failure,(508)473-4239
- Janice Parmenter,Tyler, age 29, Chronic Addiction,(508)528-5715
- Judy Daubney,Clifford, age 27, Suicide,(508)529-6942
- Linda Teres,.....Russell, age 19, Automobile Accident,(508)366-2085
- Mitchell Greenblatt,....Ian, age 18, Automobile Accident,..... (508)653-0541

It is always useful to have more Telephone Friends; individuals who are willing to provide support and comfort via the telephone. The chapter provides guidance for those who want to help. When you listen and talk to the bereaved, you make a difference. A longer list of Telephone Friends increases the likelihood that someone will be available when needed. Call Ed Motuzas at (508) 473-4239 if you would like to be a Telephone Friend.

On Your Birthday

This morning when I woke up, I felt like I had been punched in the stomach. Four years. You would have been four years old today. I miss you terribly. How can it have been so long ago, that I first held you, and heard you cry? It seems like yesterday, and yet so long ago. It has been such a long time; I don't cry anymore. At least, that is what everyone thinks. How can I, after so many years, still feel the pain, so fresh, so strong, so near? How can I, after so many years, tell someone that I still hurt, the pain still exists; that I still cry?

I miss you, Joey. Joey. Just writing your name brings back memories. Laughter, joy, tears and pain. Mixed together, ebbing and flowing. Precious, those memories, bringing light into my night; carrying hope to my shattered soul. Buoying me up when I stumble, giving me direction when I am lost. It sometimes seems as though everyone has forgotten, even though I know your memory is written indelibly on their hearts. No one could ever forget you that knew you, and many who never met you remember you still. And yet, I still feel alone in this journey for me. I must find my own way, while they find theirs. Sometimes we are on the path together; other times we are far apart.

And so on this day, I remember you. I long to hold you, to speak your name. But when I speak of you, who will listen? Who can?

But I listen; I hear. I write my feelings to you, preserving the precious memories of this day. These are your memories, in place of hopes and dreams. Things that can never be given way to the things that are, preparing me for the things that will be. Your memories bring meaning to the present, and cast light on the future, giving the hope and strength to carry on. Thank you so much for the memories.

Courage - Surprise - An Understanding

Attendance Requirement: Courage

I don't think I am unique. I did NOT want to attend a meeting of Compassionate Friends. I was coerced by my wife. It was subtle but effective. My son, on the other hand, made 'a Devil's deal;' he agreed to go to the next meeting in exchange for a favor - his debt some weeks away.

The thought of discussing death nauseates. We, my son and I, had made a bad deal.

The Meeting: A Surprise

I was surprised to find I was not the only man to have lost a child. There was a reality to that recognition. My loss, not unlike yours, is a personal matter. No one can tell me how I feel or how I ought to feel. Yet, the group never made me feel guilty about my selfishness; they understood.

The Result: An Understanding

Compassionate Friends is not an efficient organization. There are no systems, no quick easy cures. Grief is a catharsis.

Most of what you hear here you will dismiss; it will not apply to you. But there are nuggets - small ideas you will want to try or things you want to think about. Some you will try. Many you will discard. Only a few will help the pain. These, you will treasure. Your friends and associates may try to understand your grief and try to help. They can do neither. They don't understand. The people who attend the meetings do understand. And they try to help. My son felt he had gained little from the meeting. Yet he left feeling he had helped someone else deal with his grief. What a marvelous satisfaction for a 15-year-old.

What's In It For You?

Compassionate Friends is here to help - to listen, to suggest, to understand. If you handle your grief well, you do not need Compassionate Friends. But we need you! Your approach or method of dealing with grief could help one or more of us. Please share it.

TO BEREAVED GRANDPARENTS

I am powerlessness. I am helplessness. I am frustration.

I sit here with her and I cry with her. She cries for her daughter and I cry for mine. I can't help her. I can't reach inside and take her broken heart. I must watch her suffer day after day and see her desolation.

I listen to her tell me over and over how she misses Emily, how she wants her back. I can't bring Emily back for her. I can't buy her an even better Emily than she had, like I could buy her an even better toy when she was a child.

I can't kiss the hurt and make it go away. I can't even kiss a small part of it away. There's no bandaid large enough to cover her bleeding heart.

There was a time I could listen to her talk about a fickle boyfriend and tell her it would be okay, and know in my heart that in two weeks she wouldn't even think of him. Can I tell her it'll be okay in two years when I know it will never be okay? That she will carry this pain of "what might have been" in her deepest heart for the rest of her life?

I see this young woman, my child, who was once carefree and fun-loving and bubbling with life, slumped in a chair with her eyes full of agony. Where is my power now? Where is my Mother's bag of tricks that will make it all better?

Why can't I join her in the aloneness of her grief? As tight as my arms wrap around her, I can't reach that aloneness. Where are the magic words that will give her comfort?

What chapter in Dr. Spock tells me how to do this? He has told me everything else I've needed to know. Where are the answers? I should have them. I'm the mother.

What can I give her to make her better? A cold wet wash cloth will ease that swelling of her crying eyes, but it won't stop the reason for her tears. What treat will bring joy back to her? What prize will bring that "happy child" smile back again? I know that someday she'll find happiness again, that her life will have meaning again. I can hold out hope for her someday, but what about now? This hour? this day?"

I can give her my love and my prayers and my care and my concern. I could give her my life. But even that won't help.

Margaret Gamer

MENTION MY CHILD'S NAME

The best thing in your life is to have a child. They bring you so much love with each little smile.

So much laughter and fun you have with them each day, but it all ends with sadness when they are taken away.

No one ever knows how we feel deep down inside or how many times each day we've sat there and cried, wondering why this has happened to our girl or boy who has given to us so much happiness and joy.

I love it when someone mentions my daughter's name. There are so many who don't understand we will never be the same, but we do try to go on for all who love us so dear. And in our quiet moments we still shed a tear.

Our sorrow and sadness will just never go away. We hide most of our feelings to those who are with us each day. So many don't want to talk or even mention our child's name. They just do not realize how much we hurt and that is a shame.

But there are groups out there who do such a good deed, they give you the support and love that you really need. If you want to talk about your child or who is to blame, they will listen to you when you mention your child's name.

There are so many like you that really do care. For those who don't understand the hurt that we go thru, we hope and pray that it will never happen to you.

Coming to your first meeting is the hardest thing to do. But you have nothing to lose and everything to gain. Try not to judge your first meeting as to whether or not TCF will work for you. The second, third, or fourth meeting might be the time you will find the right person - or just the right words said that will help you in your grief work.

TO OUR OLD MEMBERS

We need your encouragement and support. You are the string that ties our group together and the glue that makes it stick. Each meeting we have new parents. THINK BACK... what would it have been like for you if there had not been any “oldies” to welcome you, share your grief, and encourage you? It was from them you heard, “your pain will not always be this bad; it really does get softer.”
